Janae Moss brings unique and broad experience to city leadership, with the vision and know-how to unite many voices and perspectives, and the grit to do the hard work to help our city and our people, thrive today and into the future.

Janae is a mother, entrepreneur, businesswoman, humanitarian and family advocate, and community leader. She and her husband of 23 years, Jon, have grown a family of seven children and several businesses together.

As President in their businesses, which currently employ over 2000 people, Janae plays an active role in all major decisions. She is Board Chair of United Way of Utah County, serves on the Utah Valley Chamber Board, and has founded non-profit organizations working to give families and communities tools to strengthen and lead their communities.

In different times and stages of their lives, Janae has lived in six different areas of Provo. She’s gained an appreciation for both the diverse circumstances of our citizens and the life experiences, dreams and beliefs that we share. Each experience has added to her appreciation for and understanding of the unique mix of people and neighborhoods in Provo and adds to the wide-ranging experience she brings to Provo’s City Council.
